LaGrange College

Life LaGrange!

Greetings! Here we are at LaGrange College. The first person you meet is smiling Roddie deMaflinger, in charge of admissions. Everyone asks him, "Roddie, why do you spell your last name with a small 'd'?"

He just smiles. He's a nice guy. He takes you to see Miss Merry Marie. Be nice to her. She hands out money to pay for your higher education.

Now, you register for classes. Your first step is to fill out a blue, pink, and yellow copy of the financial aid form. Throw away two of the copies, then move to the next table. Give the person seated there the third copy (you didn't throw it away, did you?), and say goodbye to your hard earned money. Oh well, easy come . . . Move on to the first week of classes — time to meet people, and if you want to, study.

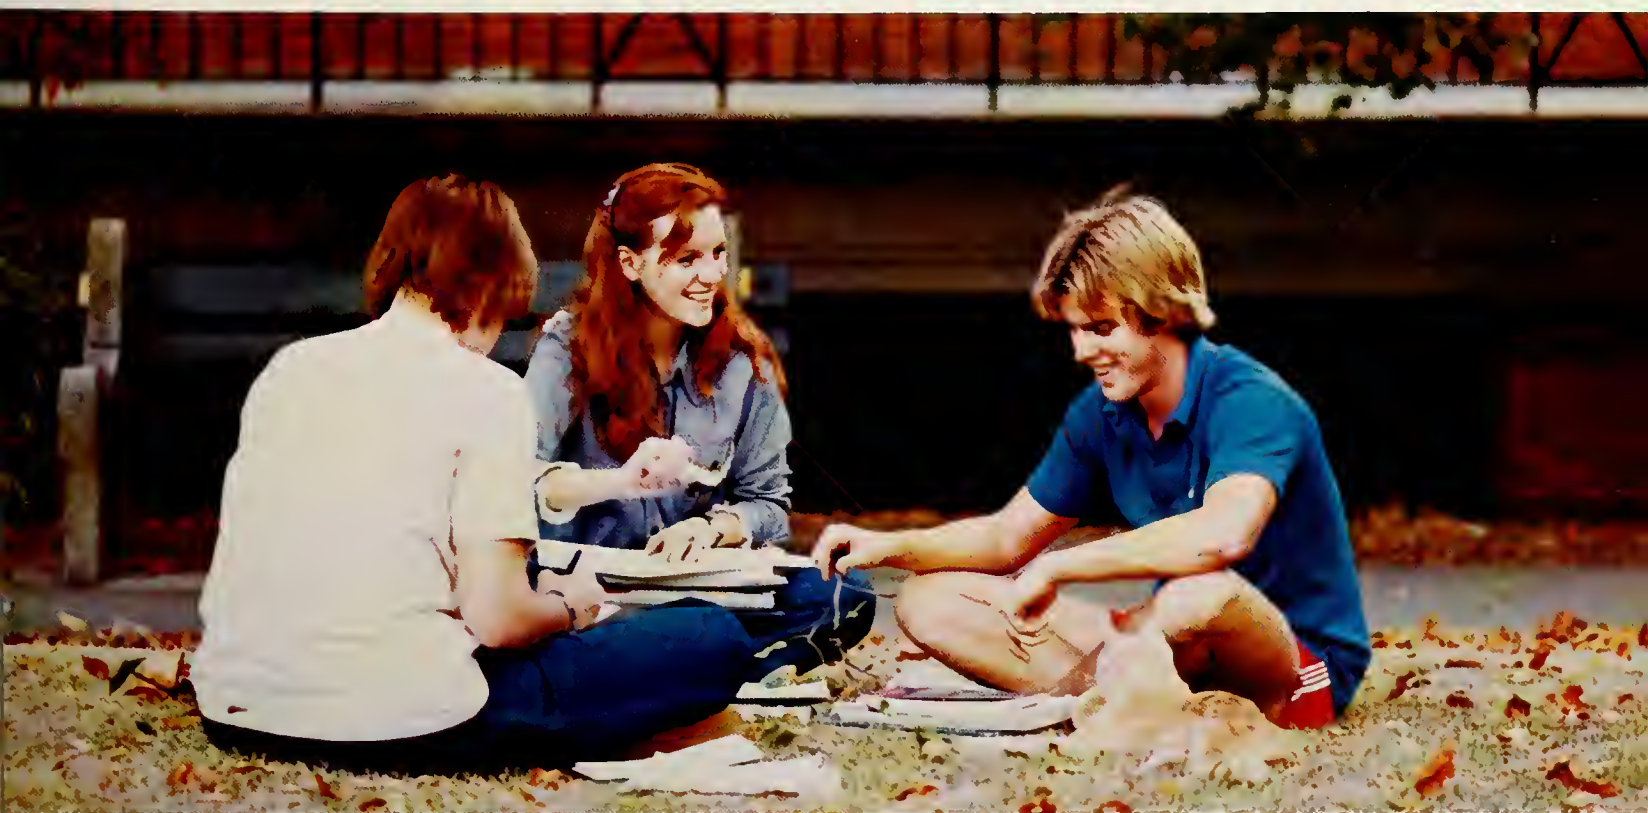

A People Set Apart

Meet Mike O. Blivion, freshman pledge to I Phelta Thi. He goes to frat parties, drinks, meets girls there who drink, and gets back to the dorm very late. He also regularly misses his eight o'clock class. He says his alarm clock is broken.

Ah, and here's Joe N. Dee. He sometimes says that fraternities are for the pseudo-elitist spawn of a capitalist-oriented demagogery. Usually he just says that they're for jerks.

Sitting next to him is Karen Hermaskovich. Karen collects Milton memorabilia and quotes the Koran. She has a hard time getting dates. Outside the student center is a crowd of guys. No wonder, look who's in the middle of the crowd. It's Ima Thi, known affectionately as being "up front" — which is where her main assets are. When not surrounded by a crowd of guys, she may frequently be seen on the porch swing on the back side of the Smith building with her latest victim . . . er . . . boyfriend.

People...

Meeting People

Hermey Firnburger is a junior. He transferred to LaGrange from Old Harris College. People don't understand when he asks intelligent questions in class like, "May I ask a question, sir?" He also has a bad habit of getting lost in the bookstore.

Oh, there's Gilda Dif. No one quite seems to know anything about her, but then, no one seems to want to, either.

Well, that takes care of about 5% of our students. Those are the ones who make things interesting, or, at least entertaining. The rest of the students are just plain folks, cruising through life or whatever it takes to survive. They cram for tests, sleep late on Saturdays to catch up from cramming for tests, and watch the other 5% do the strange things they do to get their names in obscure college yearbooks like this one.

DORM LIFE MAKES LIFE LAGRANGE

One of Finest Is LaGrange

Price Theater is one of the finest college drama theaters in the nation. The $2 million dramatic arts building, which opened in the fall of 1975, has a 280-seat auditorium with continental seating and utilizes the latest acoustical concepts. The 2,898-square-foot stage can be used as a conventional stage or converted into a thrust stage by an hydraulic lift. When the lift is down, it forms an orchestra pit. The projection room contains sophisticated sound and lighting systems costing a quarter of a million dollars. Named for the late Lewis Price of LaGrange, a long-time member of the LaGrange College Board of Trustees, the theater and five-acre tract on which it is built was a gift of the Callaway Foundation, Inc. of LaGrange.

SMITH HALL

Smith Reflects College's Past

Smith Building is the oldest building on the LaGrange College campus. The main portion of this historic building was constructed in 1842 of handmade brick formed from native clay. An addition was built in 1887. The structure was named for Oreon Smith, wife of President Rufus W. Smith (1885-1915). LaGrange College is a Methodist affiliated institution, and for several generations the four columns of Smith Hall have been called with whimsical affection: Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The window panes in Smith were from hand-poured glass, and provided a unique service which their manufacturers did not imagine. Young women often etched the initials of their sweethearts in the glass panes. Evidence of the etchings date back to November 30, 1893.

Beauty Shown Through History

The Chapel is one of the more contemporary yet historic structures on campus. A gift of the Callaway Foundation, Inc. of LaGrange, it was built in 1965, but includes materials linking it to the origins of Christian worship. Bricks and windows used in the chapel are from the former sanctuary of The First Methodist Church of LaGrange built in 1898, including two beautiful cathedral windows made of stained glass in Belgium more than 100 years ago. Three significant stones have been mounted in the building. A stone from the Temple of Apollo at Corinth, Greece, is embedded in the north side of the chapel. The temple was erected around 540 B.C. and St. Paul preached nearby in the market place around 50 A.D., founding the church to which his Epistles to the Corinthians were addressed. On the chapel's east side is a stone from the Benedictine Monastery on the Iona Island of Scotland. Christian worship began there in 563 A.D. and the monastery dates back to the 13th Century. A stone from St. George's Chapel, Windsor, England, is in the south side of the building. The cupola (belfry) atop the chapel contains both a bell from one of the last steam engines on the Atlanta and West Point Railroad (Southern Railway System).

This is the closing. Rather than risk bold sarcasm or irony, we figured that we'd just come out and say a few things about LC, things you may or may not believe, but you've undoubtedly heard before.

Life at LaGrange may not be living — it depends on who you are. It is what you make it. LaGrange College has a character, a personality, if you like, which cannot be mistaken or denied. It's character may include apathy, cliques, and low-key living, but that's part of what makes it LC. And what makes LC is you. And you are a product of these times — times when apathy and self-interest are common. You are also a product of your time of life, a stage between dependency, freedom,— and responsibility.

It's the last chance, so it seems, before you have to join the ranks of those who have plodded on before you. So, why not hang on to such a blissful state? How can it be undesirable to want to be self-contented?

Well, its not. But there comes a time when you have to reach for something bigger, higher — something real, that no one can deny you. When you find that time, its yours.

But yours also is the responsibility (yes, there's always a catch) to look outside of yourself and see a world that you have to live in, whether it seems good or bad, rich or poor, real or unreal. And, if you don't like what you see, its your choice whether to do something about it — or do nothing and accept things as they are. The sad thing about giving people choices, though, is that they often take the easiest route.

But, supposing the choice is made to change something in the world that doesn't seem right. It doesn't take armies, or politics, or money (well, money might help). What it takes is each person doing what he can, when he can, to bring about a difference. And when one person feels a certain way about an issue, there's bound to be someone else around who feels the same way. And if what they think has any real basis, they can show someone else their point of view, and so on, etc.

Well, so much for optimism. The point is, it's up to you. If you think the food served by the cafeteria is so bad, let somebody (not just somebody, but SOMEBODY R. ADMINISTRATION) know about it. If you think the bathrooms in Broad Street are breeding new life forms, don't just arm yourself against attack when you go to take a shower; let Joe Janitor know. After all, you pay for decent living conditions, and the administration is paid to serve you.

A wise man once said if enough people woke up around here, they'd find out that the students can get just about whatever they want — within reason.

Anyway, the choice is yours . . .

Just One More

An unexpected guest showed up for the Kappa Delta White Rose Ball held at the Marriott Hotel in Atlanta. He shows his acrobatic ability on the head table of the ballroom after a representative from the group told him, "This is a private party — you'll have to leave."
